

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASEAustin Hardware Named Exclusive US Distributor for Enginia S.r.l.

LEE'S SUMMIT, MO. (June 2015) Austin Hardware & Supply, Inc. has been named the exclusive United States distributor for Enginia, an Italy-based designer and manufacturer of access hardware used in the construction of air handling units. The addition of a world-class manufacturer like Enginia provides Austin with a new line of products dedicated to HVAC manufacturers.

Enginia's wide variety of plastic components and assembled products for air handling units include fewer components than similar products, resulting in simpler installation, reduced installation time, and easy adjustability. They practice co-engineering with their customers to allow them to maintain constant technical improvement in standard and custom products. Enginia has been ISO 9001 certified since 2002.

Tary Krahenbuhl, Vice President of Business Development at Austin Hardware, described the partnership with Enginia:

“Austin Hardware is very excited about our new partnership with Enginia. They have played an important role in the European HVAC market for a number of years designing and manufacturing components widely used in the construction of air handling units. Italy-based Enginia also understands the needs of the HVAC products used in America, and they have designed a latching system that is suited to meet the rigorous demands of the HVAC enclosures built in the USA. HVAC manufacturers will gain significant advantages with the easy installation and versatility of components designed for this new latching system. Customers and operators will truly appreciate the strong ergonomic design along with the convenience of the simple and multiple level adjustments that they can make to secure access panels on their HVAC units.”
